

China Advance Pricing Arrangement Annual Report

(2010)

State Administration of Taxation
People's Republic of China

Foreword

The release of the “China Advance Pricing Arrangement Annual Report (2009)” has been consistently well-received by enterprises and our peers. We therefore issue the 2010 Annual Report, prepared subsequent to the release of the relevant statistics.

In recent years, China’s State Administration of Taxation (“SAT”) has been placing greater emphasis on tax services, while at the same time strengthening tax administration pursuant to the relevant laws and regulations. Accordingly, the SAT has held firm to the target of focusing on “both prevention and investigation”, creating a three-in-one standard anti-avoidance system which integrates “administration, services and investigation”. The Advance Pricing Arrangement (“APA”) lies at the core of the “services” aspect. We believe that certainty is the highest level of tax services that tax authorities could offer to taxpayers, and APAs are aimed at providing the taxpayer with certainty on its transfer pricing. Therefore, we seek to encourage taxpayers’ voluntary compliance by improving tax services, coupled with strengthening transfer pricing administration and investigating non-compliance.

APAs in China have undergone rapid development since 2009, and the APA program has become an integral part of China’s anti-tax avoidance administration system. In 2010, Chinese tax authorities concluded and signed four unilateral APAs and four bilateral APAs, with additional APAs currently under examination.

This report, which represents one of the key measures the SAT takes to increase the transparency of the APA program, introduces China's APA program, its implementation procedures, development of APA practices, and offers statistics and analyses of China's APA program for the period from 2005 through 2010. The SAT hopes it will provide useful guidance to taxpayers, especially multinational enterprises investing in China as well as Chinese enterprises with overseas investments, thus helping our society, overseas tax administrations, and international organisations to deepen their understanding of China's APA practices.

Notes

This is the second annual APA report released by the State Administration of Taxation (“SAT”) to describe the mechanisms, procedures, and implementation of the APA program in China. This report is intended to provide guidelines to enterprises interested in entering into APAs with the Chinese tax authorities, and to serve as a reference for competent authorities of other countries^① and the general public to better understand China’s APA program.

This report provides statistics for the period from 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2010. This report follows the previous 2009 annual report with respect to the framework. Additions to this report include updated statistics, an additional chapter on the protection of taxpayers’ rights (Chapter IV) and a revised Section 5 of Chapter III.

This report does not have legal validity, and therefore should not be regarded as a legal basis for enterprises or any Chinese tax authorities to negotiate or conclude an APA.

① For the purpose of this report, “other countries” includes regions with independent tax jurisdiction.

I Introduction to China's APA Program

1. Definition

An APA refers to an arrangement whereby an enterprise applies in advance to negotiate and reach agreement with the tax authorities in respect of the transfer pricing methods and corresponding calculation methods to be applied to its related party transactions for future years in accordance with the arm's length principle. An APA covers related party transactions for three to five consecutive years starting from the year subsequent to the year during which the enterprise submits its formal written application.

2. Categorization

An APA may be categorized as unilateral, bilateral or multilateral based on the number of competent authorities involved in the APA.

In a unilateral APA, the enterprise enters into the APA with one country's tax authority. A unilateral APA can only provide certainty to the enterprise's pricing policy and method with respect to its related party transactions within one country, but cannot ensure that the overseas related party(ies) will effectively avoid transfer pricing audits or adjustments with respect to its transfer pricing with the enterprise by the tax authority of the related party. Thus, a unilateral APA cannot prevent international double taxation.

In a bilateral or multilateral APA, the enterprise negotiates and enters into the APA with two or more countries' competent authorities. These authorities will need to reach an agreement with regard to the pricing policies or methods used in the cross-border related party transactions of the enterprise in question. Bilateral and multilateral APAs can be used to effectively avoid international double taxation and provide certainty regarding the transfer pricing policies of the enterprise.

3. Advantages

An APA is an effective approach to deal with transfer pricing issues and potential transfer pricing disputes with the collaboration between tax authorities and an enterprise. An APA between the tax authority and the enterprise is binding on all parties. The enterprise shall proactively conform to all the provisions and requirements of the arrangement, while tax authorities shall monitor the implementation of the agreement.

An APA is a voluntary agreement conducted on the basis of equality and mutual trust. It provides an effective way to enhance understanding, strengthen collaboration, and mitigate disputes between enterprises and tax authorities. APAs have the following benefits:

- a) Provide certainty for tax authorities and enterprises in regards to transfer pricing issues for future years, which will offer certainty with regard to taxpayers' operations and relevant tax obligations and provide tax authorities with an expectation of stable revenue;
- b) Reduce tax authorities' costs related to transfer pricing administration and audit as well as enterprises' tax compliance costs by mitigating the risk of a transfer pricing audit; and
- c) Improve the tax compliance services provided by the tax authorities, facilitate the balanced development of administration and service, and assure taxpayers of the relevant rights and benefits.

Bilateral and multilateral APAs can also provide the following additional advantages:

- a) Facilitate communication and collaboration among the competent tax authorities of different jurisdictions; and
- b) Help enterprises avoid transfer pricing adjustments as well as double taxation risks in two (for bilateral APA) or more (for multilateral APA) tax jurisdictions.

II Legislation and Practice Development of China's APA

1. History

China began using APAs on a trial basis in the late 1990s. In 1998, an APA was included as one of “other reasonable methods of transfer pricing adjustments” in Article 28 of “The Regulation on the Taxation of Transactions between Related Parties (Trial)”^① (Guo Shui Fa [1998] No. 59). In 1998, the first unilateral APA was reached between a tax authority and an enterprise.

In 2002, the APA program was formally introduced in Article 53 of “The Implementation Rules of the Tax Collection and Administration Law of the People’s Republic of China”^② (Guo Wu Yuan Ling No. 362), and APAs were elevated from an adjustment method to a program.

In 2004, the SAT promulgated “Implementation Rules on Advance Pricing Arrangements for Transactions between Related Parties (Trial Version)” (Guo Shui Fa [2004] No. 118), which provides details of the APA program and specific procedures such as negotiation and conclusion procedures, requirements, follow-up execution and monitoring, as well as guidance on APA administration in China. Such a step further regulated the administration of China’s APA program. From 1998 to 2004, a number of local Chinese tax authorities initiated trial programs and concluded unilateral APAs with enterprises. However, due to the absence during this period of implementation guidance that was specific, standardized and imposed nationwide, concluded APAs were usually found to be defective through over-simplified APA articles and insufficient function, risk and economic analysis. For this reason, this report does not contain statistics about APAs concluded during this period.

In order to standardize and ensure consistency of China’s APA administration across the country, the SAT has implemented rules for APA monitoring and administration since 2005 requiring the local tax authorities to submit the draft unilateral agreement to the SAT for review and approval before its ① Article 28 – Transfer Pricing Adjustment Methods for Purchases and Sales of Tangible Assets: ... (IV) Other appropriate methods: If none of the first three methods are applicable, the tax authorities can choose other reasonable methods, such as “profit-comparison method”, “profit-split method”, and “net profit method”, among others. The enterprise can also adopt an “advance pricing arrangement” after applying for and obtaining approval from the tax bureau in charge.

② Article 53: The taxpayer may propose a pricing principle and calculation method to the in-charge tax authority concerning the transactions between them and associated enterprises. The in-charge tax authority shall examine, verify and decide whether to approve the proposal. If approval is given, an advance agreement shall be reached with the taxpayer concerning pricing related matters and the tax authority shall supervise the implementation.

conclusion. Meanwhile, local tax authorities are required to steadily promote APA programs and strictly conform to the relevant regulations to improve the administrative soundness of the APA program. China's APA administration has since stepped into a new stage of well-founded regulation. In April 2005, Japan and China concluded the first bilateral APA in China's history. Subsequently, China reached bilateral APAs with the United States, the Republic of Korea, and other countries. From 2005 to 2008, the Chinese tax authorities concluded 41 APAs, including 36 unilateral and five bilateral APAs.

At the beginning of 2009, Guo Shui Fa [2009] No. 2 "Implementation Measures of Special Tax Adjustments (Trial Version)" ("the Measures") was promulgated to facilitate the implementation of the Corporate Income Tax Law of the People's Republic of China and its Implementation Regulations. Chapter Six of the Measures provides more detailed rules and implementation guidance on China's APA program. In 2009, China's bilateral APA program experienced rapid growth; the Chinese tax authorities signed 12 APAs, including five unilateral and seven bilateral APAs.

In 2010, the Chinese tax authorities signed 8 APAs in total, including 4 unilateral APAs and 4 bilateral APAs.

From 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2010, the Chinese tax authorities received 73 written requests or formal applications for bilateral APAs. The countries involved include Japan, Korea, the United States, Denmark and Singapore, among others.

In addition, the SAT has received numerous enquiries on bilateral APAs from enterprises. It is expected that the number of APA applications will continue to increase.

2. Existing Legal Basis

The legal basis and relevant laws, regulations and implementation rules governing APAs primarily include the following:

- a) The relevant clauses in the agreements for the avoidance of double taxation (the "Treaty" or "Arrangement") between the government of China and the government of the corresponding country (region);
- b) Article 42 of the Corporate Income Tax Law of the People's Republic of China;
- c) Article 113 of the Implementation Regulations of the Corporate Income Tax Law of the People's Republic of China;
- d) Article 53 of the Implementation Regulations of the Administration of Tax Collection and Administration Law of the People's Republic of China;
- e) Chapter 6 and other related provisions of the Implementation Measures of Special Tax Adjustments (Trial Version) (Guo Shui Fa [2009] No. 2).

III APA Procedures

1. Prerequisites to an APA Application

In general, an enterprise meeting all of the following three formal criteria may apply for an APA:

a) The annual amount of related party transactions exceeds RMB 40 million. The types of related party transactions include the following:

- Purchase, sale, transfer and use of tangible assets;
- Transfer or use of intangible assets;
- Financing transactions; and
- Provision of services.

b) The enterprise has complied with the related party disclosure requirements according to the law.

The taxpayer should submit the “Annual Reporting Forms for Related-Party Dealings of Enterprises of the People’s Republic of China” with the annual Corporate Income Tax return to the tax authority within 5 months of the year following the year of related-party transactions.

c) The enterprise has prepared, maintained and provided contemporaneous documentation in accordance with the requirements of Guo Shui Fa [2009] No. 2.

The taxpayer shall prepare, maintain, and, upon request by tax authorities, submit contemporaneous documentation regarding its related party transactions for each tax year. The contemporaneous documentation includes the enterprise’s organizational structure, business operations, related party transactions, comparability analysis and selection and application of the transfer pricing method.

The process of applying for and negotiating an APA requires substantial commitment of resources from both the tax authority and the enterprise. In order to use its limited resources more effectively and enhance efficiency, the Chinese tax authority in practice will give priority to APA applications made by the following types of enterprises:

- a) Enterprises which have provided sufficient and complete information, actively cooperate with the tax authority's examination and evaluation, and proactively submit a reasonable APA proposal;
- b) Enterprises which have been investigated by the tax authorities for their transfer pricing policies.

In China, enterprises are not required to pay an application fee to the tax authority in order to apply for an APA.

2. APA Process and Implementation

The APA application and administration process involves the following six stages:

- A. Pre-filing meeting
- B. Formal application
- C. Examination and evaluation
- D. Negotiation
- E. Signing
- F. Implementation and monitoring

The following chart illustrates the process:

A. Pre-filing Meeting

Prior to the formal application for an APA, the enterprise should submit a letter of intent (“LOI”) to apply for an APA to the tax authority. When applying for a bilateral (or multilateral) APA, the enterprise must submit LOIs to both the SAT and the in-charge local tax authority.

The in-charge tax authority (or the SAT in the case of a bilateral or multilateral APA), may conduct a pre-filing meeting with the enterprise to discuss relevant matters and the feasibility of reaching an APA, and complete an “APA Meeting Record” (see Appendix I). During the pre-filing meeting, the tax authority will discuss with the enterprise based on the type of the APA application.

(1) Contents of the pre-filing meeting

If the enterprise applies for a unilateral APA, the following topics will generally be discussed in the pre-filing meeting:

- a. Years to be covered under the arrangement;
- b. Related parties involved and related party transactions to be covered under the arrangement;
- c. Overview of the enterprise’s business operations in prior and future years;
- d. Functional and risk profiles of related parties involved in the APA application;
- e. Whether the methodology in the arrangement would be applied to resolve transfer pricing issues in prior years; and
- f. Any other situations requiring explanation.

If the enterprise applies for a bilateral APA or multilateral APA, the following areas shall be discussed in addition to the items above:

- a. Any request by the enterprise for arrangement of a pre-filing meeting with relevant competent tax authority or authorities involved in the APA;
- b. Overview of business operations of related parties involved in the APA and their related party transactions in prior years; and
- c. The transfer pricing methodology and calculation method of the APA proposed to the relevant competent tax authority or authorities involved in the APA.

(2) Form of the pre-filing meeting and follow-up matters

The pre-filing meeting can be held anonymously.

If the two parties form a consensus after the pre-filing meeting, the tax authority will issue the “Notice of Formal Meeting of the APA” (see Appendix II) to the enterprise, and inform the enterprise to submit the formal application. If the pre-filing meeting does not lead to a consensus, the tax authority will issue the “Notice of Rejection of Enterprise’s Application for APA” (see Appendix III) to the enterprise along with rejection reasons.

B. Formal Application

The enterprise shall submit the written application package to the tax authority within three months upon receipt of the “Notice of Formal Meeting of the APA” (see Appendix IV), and submit the “Formal Application Letter for APA” to the tax authority. For a bilateral or multilateral APA, the enterprise shall submit the “Formal Application Letter for APA” and the “Application to Initiate Mutual Agreement Procedures” (see Appendix V) to both the SAT and the in-charge local tax authority.

The written application package of an APA should include the following:

- (1) Descriptions of relevant group structure, internal organizational structure of the enterprise, related party relationships, and related party transactions;
- (2) Financial and accounting reports of the enterprise for the most recent three years, and information on product performance and assets (including intangible and tangible assets);
- (3) Types of related party transactions and tax years to be covered by the APA;
- (4) Allocation of functions and risks among related parties, including the allocation criteria used such as entities involved, personnel, expenses, assets, etc.;
- (5) Proposed transfer pricing methodology and calculation method in the APA, and the functional and risk analysis, comparability analysis and assumptions used for supporting such methodology and method;
- (6) Description for market conditions, including industry development trends and competitive environment;
- (7) Annual information on business scale, business performance forecasts and business plans for the period covered by the APA;
- (8) Information regarding related party transactions in relevance, business arrangements and financial results such as profit levels, etc., involved in the arrangement;
- (9) Whether there are double taxation issues; and
- (10) Relevant issues in relation to domestic and international laws and tax treaties.

Enterprises may apply for an extension to tax authorities relating to the submission of the formal written application package and submit the “Application for Extension of Submitting the Formal Application for APA” (see Appendix VI) under the following exceptional circumstances:

- (1) Certain information requires special preparation;
- (2) Certain information requires technical processing, such as translation; and
- (3) Other non-subjective reasons.

The tax authority shall provide a written response to the enterprise and issue the “Reply to Application for Extension of Submitting the Formal Application for APA” (see Appendix VII) to the enterprise. If the tax authority fails to reply within the specified timeframe, it is deemed to have granted an extension to the enterprise.

When the enterprise applies for a bilateral (or multilateral) APA, the reports it submit to the two (or the respective) competent authorities should be consistent. If the application report is originally prepared in a foreign language, it should be fully translated into Chinese when submitted to the Chinese tax authorities with no deletions or abridgement. The relevant foreign-language contracts should also be translated into Chinese.

C. Examination and Evaluation

Upon receipt of the formal APA application package and other required documents, the tax authority will evaluate the documents and form a position within five months, and may request additional information from the enterprise during the evaluation process.

The scope of examination and evaluation conducted by the tax authority will mainly cover the following:

- (1) Overview of historical operations;
- (2) Functional and risk profiles;
- (3) Comparable information;
- (4) Critical assumptions;
- (5) Transfer pricing methodology and calculation method; and
- (6) Expected arm’s length price or profit range.

If needed, the tax authority will conduct an on-site audit to evaluate the actual operation of the enterprise.

If the evaluations need to be extended due to special factors, the tax authorities should formally inform the enterprise, and issue the “Notice of Extension of Examination and Evaluation of APA” (see Appendix VIII). The delay should not exceed three months.

D. Negotiation

For unilateral APAs, the tax authority will arrange negotiations and discussions with the enterprise after the tax authority reaches a position following its examination and evaluation process. If both parties can reach an agreement, the draft APA along with an examination and evaluation report will be submitted to the SAT for review and approval.

For bilateral or multilateral APAs, the SAT will arrange negotiations and discussions with the relevant competent authorities after each competent authority has completed its own review and evaluation processes. If all parties agree, a draft APA should be prepared according to the memorandum of negotiation. A draft APA should include the following:

- (1) Basic information of related parties such as names and addresses;
- (2) Related party transactions and the years to be covered under the arrangement;
- (3) The selected comparable prices or transactions, transfer pricing methodology and calculation methods, and financial projections in the arrangement;
- (4) Definition of technical terms in relation to the transfer pricing applications and calculation basis;
- (5) Critical assumptions;
- (6) Obligations of the enterprise including annual reporting, record keeping, and notification of changes to the assumptions, etc.;
- (7) Legal force of the arrangement, and confidentiality of documents and information;
- (8) Provisions on mutual responsibilities;
- (9) Revisions of the arrangement;
- (10) Methods and approaches of dispute resolutions;
- (11) Effective date; and
- (12) Appendices.

E. Signing

For a unilateral APA, the legal representatives or representatives authorized by the legal representatives of both the tax authority and the enterprise officially sign the unilateral APA (see Appendix IX).

For a bilateral or multilateral APA, the representative authorized by the SAT and relevant competent tax authorities of the other tax treaty (or arrangement) party(ies) officially sign the bilateral or multilateral APA, and then according to the signed bilateral or multilateral APA, the in-charge tax authority signs a “Bilateral (Multilateral) APA Implementation Agreement” (see Appendix X) with the legal representative or the representative authorized by the legal representative of the enterprise in accordance with the signed bilateral or multilateral APA.

F. Implementation and Monitoring

The enterprise shall maintain a complete record of relevant documents and information (including accounting records and other relevant records), and shall file an annual compliance report in relation to implementation of the APA to the tax authority within five months after the end of each year.

During the term of the APA, the tax authority shall regularly inspect the enterprise’s compliance. If actual operating results of the enterprise fall outside of the agreed range of prices or profits under the arrangement, the tax authority shall adjust the actual operating results to the agreed prices or profits in accordance with the APA. In the case of a bilateral or multilateral APA, such an adjustment shall be submitted to the SAT for approval.

During the term of the APA, if there are substantial changes that affect the implementation of the APA, the enterprise should report these changes to the tax authority in writing with a detailed explanation regarding the impact of these changes on the implementation of the APA within 30 days.

Based on the review of the enterprise’s operation, the tax authority will discuss with the enterprise and either revise the provisions and relevant conditions of the arrangement or terminate the arrangement, depending on the impact of the changes on the implementation of the APA.

3. Rollback

Negotiation and signing of the APA does not affect transfer pricing audits conducted and adjustments made by tax authorities on the enterprise’s related party transactions in the year during which the enterprise submits its formal written application or any prior year.

If the related party transactions in the year of application or any prior year are the same as or similar to those covered in the APA, subject to the enterprise’s application, the transfer pricing methodology and calculation method specified in the APA can be applied to the evaluation and adjustment of the related party transaction in the year of application or any prior year upon the tax authorities’ approval.

The rollback stipulation has the advantage of resolving many years of potential transfer pricing issues through the APA application process. The relevant regulations for transfer pricing investigations are applicable to the rollback period, as far back as 10 years.

4. Renewal

If the enterprise wants the APA to be renewed when it expires, it can file an application for renewal 90 days prior to the expiration of the APA to the tax authority, by submitting the “APA Renewal Application” (see Appendix XI). This application should also include reliable supporting evidence to confirm that there have been no substantial changes to the facts and conditions in the existing APA and that the enterprise has been in full compliance with the provisions and requirements of the existing APA.

Upon receiving the application for renewal, the tax authority will issue a “Reply Letter on the APA Renewal Application” (see Appendix XII) to the enterprise. The tax authority will subsequently review and evaluate the application documents, and negotiate with the enterprise to draft the new APA and complete the renewal process.

During the term of the APA, if the enterprise’s overall profit level stays below the median most of the time, where an arm’s length range is used, the tax authority may no longer accept an application for renewal of the APA.

5. Termination or Cancellation

An APA may be terminated or cancelled under any one of the following conditions:

- (1) In case of any dispute between the in-charge tax authority and the enterprise during the term of the APA, if the dispute cannot be resolved after negotiation and discussion, it can be reported to the tax authority of the next higher level (or the SAT when a bilateral or multilateral APA is concerned) for mediation. The APA shall be terminated if the outcome of the mediation is not acceptable to the enterprise; or
- (2) If there are substantial changes regarding the critical assumptions in the APA or the core business of the enterprise, the tax authority may terminate the implementation of the APA, taking into consideration of the specific circumstances of the case.
- (3) During the term of the APA, if the tax authority discovers that the enterprise withholds truth or refuses to implement the APA, the APA shall be cancelled, i.e. be regarded as void ab initio.

IV Protection of Taxpayers' Rights

1. Confidentiality of Taxpayers' Information

The enterprise may conduct pre-filing meetings with the tax authority to discuss relevant matters and the possibility of reaching an APA on an anonymous basis.

Both the tax authority and the enterprise have the duty to keep confidential all information obtained during the whole process of the APA including pre-filing meeting, formal negotiation, examination and analysis, among others.

2. Taxpayers' Freedom of Contract

After formal negotiation and before signing of the APA, both the tax authority and the enterprise can suspend or terminate the negotiation.

In case where the tax authority and the enterprise fail to reach an agreement for an APA, the non-factual information of the enterprise such as various suggestions, inferences, ideas and conclusions obtained by the tax authority during discussions and negotiations shall not be used in future tax investigations of the transactions covered by the proposed APA.

In case of any dispute between the tax authority and the enterprise during the term of the APA, both parties shall try to resolve the dispute through negotiations and discussions. If the conclusion of the negotiation or mediation by the tax authority at the next higher level / the SAT is not acceptable to the enterprise, the APA shall be terminated.

If the enterprise wishes to renew the APA, it shall file an application for renewal to the tax authority 90 days prior to the expiration of the APA.

V Statistics

1. APAs Signed by Year

Exhibit 5-1 summarizes the number of unilateral and bilateral APAs that the Chinese tax authorities signed during each of the 2005 to 2010 calendar years.

Exhibit 5-1 Number of APAs Signed

Year	Unilateral APAs	Bilateral APAs	Multilateral APAs	Total
2005	13	1	0	14
2006	10	0	0	10
2007	7	3	0	10
2008	6	1	0	7
2009	5	7	0	12
2010	4	4	0	8
Total	45	16	0	61

China has signed 45 unilateral APAs and 16 bilateral APAs during this 6 year period, accounting for 73% and 27% of the total number of APAs in China respectively. So far China has not signed any multilateral APA.

The chart below compares the number of unilateral APAs and bilateral APAs signed from 2005 through 2010.

Chart 5-1 Number of APAs Signed 2005 – 2010

As shown in the chart above, the number of unilateral APAs is decreasing year by year, while the number of bilateral APAs is generally increasing. From 2005 to 2008, more unilateral than bilateral APAs were signed every year. However, the number of bilateral APAs exceeded that of unilateral APAs in 2009 for the first time, representing the APA program’s principal component. In 2010, the number of bilateral APAs signed was equal to that of unilateral APAs. This indicates that taxpayers are attaching more importance to bilateral APAs and looking for ways to resolve bilateral international transfer pricing issues and avoid double taxation through the MAP process. It also reflects the SAT’s intensified effort in promoting the MAP program.

2. APAs by Phase

Exhibit 5-2 provides statistics of APAs by phase as of 31 December 2010.

Exhibit 5-2 APAs by Phase (as of 31 December 2010)

Phases		Unilateral	Bilateral	Total
Pre-Acceptance	Proposal / letter of intent	4	24	28
	Pre-filing meeting	27	10	37
	Subtotal	31	34	65
Accepted Applications	Examination and evaluation ^①	3	9	12
	Negotiation	1	12	13
	Subtotal	4	21	25
Concluded APAs	Agreed but not signed	3	2	5
	Executed and monitored	11	13	24
	Expired	34	3	37
	Subtotal	48	18	66
Total		83	73	156

① There is a “Formal Application” phase that is not listed in this table since the tax authority’s acceptance of the formal application should be regarded as the start of the examination and evolution phase. The first meeting between the tax authority and enterprise in a unilateral APA or between the competent authorities in a bilateral or multilateral APA should be regarded as the start of the negotiation phase and the end of the examination and evaluation phase

The “Accepted Applications” category, as displayed in Exhibit 5-2, refers to APA applications which the tax authorities have accepted as submitted by the enterprises but where an agreement has not yet been achieved. Applications falling into this category are either under examination and evaluation or under negotiation. The other main category, “Concluded APAs”, includes APAs that have been agreed but not signed, APAs that are being executed and monitored, and APAs that have expired. China currently has 48 unilateral APAs in the “Concluded Applications” category, of which 34 have expired and 11 are under execution. There are only 4 unilateral APAs under the “Accepted Applications” category, 27 unilateral APA applications in the pre-filing meeting phase and 4 at the unilateral APA proposal phase. Regarding bilateral APAs, 18 bilateral APAs have been concluded, of which 2 are agreed to be signed and 3 expired. The other 13 concluded bilateral APAs are under implementation. There are 21 bilateral accepted applications, including 9 under examination and evaluation and 12 under negotiation. In addition, 10 enterprises have conducted pre-filing meetings with tax authorities and 24 enterprises have indicated their intention to apply for bilateral APAs with the tax authority.

While far more unilateral APAs than bilateral APAs have been concluded, most concluded unilateral APAs were signed several years ago and have therefore already expired. In contrast, of the proposed and accepted APA applications, there are fewer unilateral than bilateral applications, suggesting that bilateral APAs are expected to increase significantly both in terms of number and workload in the coming years. As the Chinese tax authorities aim to steadily promote the APA program and to improve the quality of the APA examination work, they have devoted special efforts to the pre-filing examination process. Therefore, many enterprises’ APA applications are still at the pre-acceptance stages.

3. APAs by Transaction Type

Exhibit 5-3 below illustrates the types of transactions involved in the accepted and concluded APAs as of 31 December 2010^①.

Accepted Applications			Concluded APAs
Transaction Type	Number of APAs	Percentage	Transaction Type	Number of APAs	Percentage
Purchase and sale of tangible assets	21	46%	Purchase and sale of tangible assets	54	64%
Transfer or use of intangible assets	15	32%	Transfer or use of intangible assets	15	18%
Provision of services	9	20%	Provision of services	15	18%
Financing	1	2%	Financing	0	0
Total	46	100%	Total	84	100%

As shown in Exhibit 5-3, purchase and sale of tangible assets accounts for the largest portion of transactions covered by China's APA program. Of the concluded APAs, 64% involve the purchase and sale of tangible assets, 18% involve the transfer of intangible assets, and 18% involve the provision of services. APAs involving the purchase and sale of tangible assets account for the largest proportion of accepted applications with 46% of the total, although this is lower than the proportion of concluded APAs accounted for by this type of transaction. APAs involving the transfer or use of intangible assets and the provision of services account for 32% and 20% of accepted applications, respectively, which represents an increasing trend. APAs involving financing transactions account of 2% of accepted application. These statistics indicate that most of the enterprises which applied for APAs are manufacturing companies which are mainly involved in intercompany transactions related to the purchase and sale of tangible assets. However, based on the number of accepted applications and concluded APAs, it is anticipated that the number of APAs involving other types of transactions will increase rapidly in the future. As China's tertiary industry develops, an increasing number of service companies may decide to apply for APAs. Thus, more APAs may involve transactions related to transfer or use of intangible assets, services and financing.

^① As some APAs involve multiple transaction types, the total number of related party transactions is greater than the number of APAs.

4. Bilateral APAs by Region

From 2005 to 2010, China signed 12 bilateral APAs with Asian countries, and 3 with an European country and 1 with a North American country. The following chart displays the percentage of bilateral APAs accounted for by each of these regions.

Chart 5-2 Bilateral APAs by Region

5. APAs by Time Taken

Exhibit 5-4 illustrates the time taken for the unilateral and bilateral APAs signed by China in 2010.

Exhibit 5-4 APAs (2010) by Time Taken

Type	From Application to Signing				Total
	< 1 year	1-2 years	2-3 years	> 3 years
Unilateral	1	3	0	0	4
Bilateral	2	0	2	0	4

As shown in Exhibit 5-4, China's unilateral APAs signed in 2010 were all completed in two years or less, with 75% taking between one and two years to be completed and 25% completed within one year. 50% of Bilateral APAs were completed within one year and the remaining 50% taking two to three years to be completed.

Exhibit 5-5 illustrates the time taken for the unilateral and bilateral APAs signed by China from 2005 to 2010.

Exhibit 5-5 APAs (from 2005 to 2010) by Time Taken

Type	From Application to Signing				Total
	< 1 year	1-2 years	2-3 years	> 3 years
Unilateral	24	21	0	0	45
Bilateral	9	3	3	1	16

As shown in Exhibit 5-5, China's unilateral APAs were all completed in two years or less, with 53% completed within one year and 47% taking one and two years to be completed. While Bilateral APAs generally take more time, many were completed within one year (56%); 19% took one to two years, 19% took two to three years, and the remaining 6% were completed in more than three years.

The time required to complete the entire APA process depends on many factors including the type of APA (i.e. unilateral, bilateral, or multilateral), the complexity of issues involved, the quality of the documents provided by the enterprises, the efficiency of the tax officers' review process, and the extent of the enterprise's cooperation (e.g. timely provision of information).

The Chinese tax authorities generally aim to complete the review and negotiation process within 12 months for unilateral APAs and within 24 months for bilateral APAs. Bilateral APAs involve negotiations with relevant competent authorities through the MAP process and therefore require more time to reach a consensus than unilateral APAs do.

6. APAs by Transfer Pricing Method

The chart below shows the transfer pricing methods applied in both the unilateral and bilateral APAs signed in 2010^①.

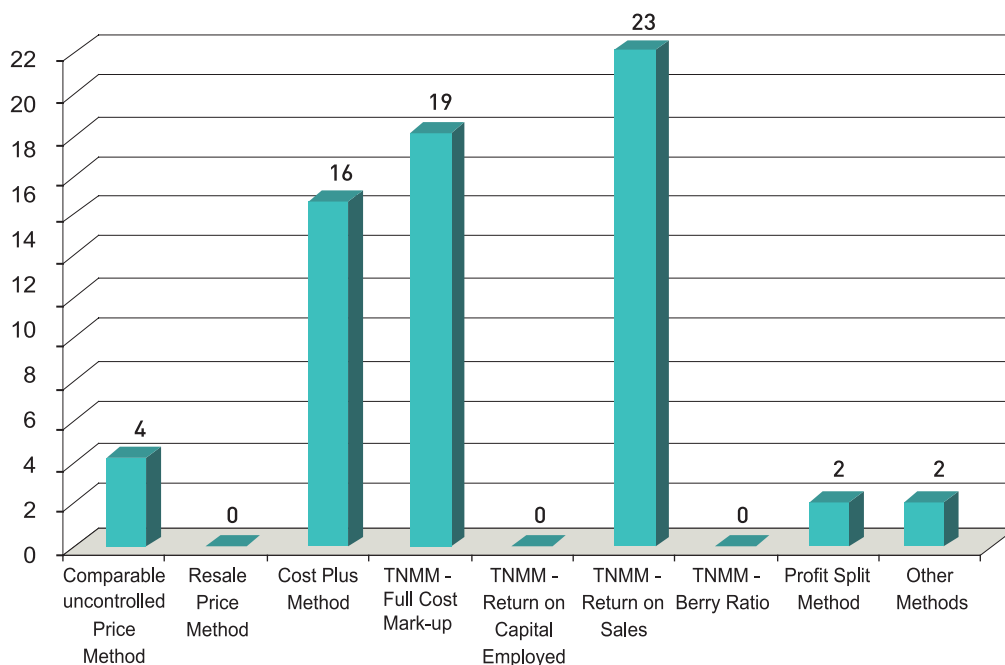

Chart 5-3 Transfer pricing methods applied in APAs signed between 2005 and 2010

① Some APAs involve two or more kinds of transactions and multiple transfer pricing methods may be used.

The data indicates that the transactional net margin method (TNMM) is the most commonly used transfer pricing method, being used in 42, or 64%, of signed APAs. The most commonly used profit level indicators are the Return on Sales ratio (used in 23 APAs) and the Full Cost Mark-up ratio (used in 19 APAs). Recently, the Chinese tax authorities have frequently used public data, which explains why the TNMM is the most commonly used method in the signed APAs. Moreover, the TNMM is also used to determine the routine profit when applying a residual profit split method.

The second most popular transfer pricing method is the cost plus method, being used in 16 of the concluded APAs. The other transfer pricing methods are applied less frequently. The comparable uncontrolled price (CUP) method is used in 4 cases; the profit split method in 2 cases; and other methods in the other 2 signed APAs. As the CUP method requires a very high standard of comparability for application and the resale price method and profit split method require a heavy amount of information regarding the transaction and pricing, these methods tend to be applied less frequently in practice. The Chinese tax authorities hope that enterprises will better cooperate with tax officers during the APA review and evaluation phase and provide sufficient information regarding transactions and prices so that the resale price method and the profit split method may be more frequently applied in the APA program.

Advance Pricing Arrangement (Unilateral)

(Text for Reference)

Pursuant to the “Corporate Income Tax Law of the People’s Republic of China” and its Implementation Regulations as well as the “Law of the People’s Republic of China on the Tax Collections and Administration” and its Implementation Regulations, upon formal application of _____ (company name) and the approval of the Tax Bureau of _____ (tax office name), both parties would like to conclude this Advance Pricing Arrangement (hereinafter referred to as this “APA”).

Article 1 General Definitions

For the purposes of this APA, unless otherwise defined elsewhere:

The term “in-charge tax authority” refers to the State Tax Bureau of _____ (tax office name);

The term “taxpayer” refers to _____ (company name).

Article 2 Type of APA

This APA is a unilateral Advance Pricing Arrangement.

Article 3 Scope of Application

Type of tax(es) covered: This APA is applicable to corporate income tax and other tax types.

Type of related party transaction(s) covered: This APA is applicable to _____ (description of the transaction type) transactions between the taxpayer and _____ (company name), which is its related party.

Article 4 Applicable Term

This APA is applicable for _____ (number) tax years, with each taxable year covered being _____ .

Article 5 Critical Assumptions

The transfer pricing methodology and calculation method used in this APA are based on the following assumptions:

During the covered period, in case any of the above critical assumptions should change, the taxpayer should report to the in-charge tax authority within 30 days after the change takes place. Depending on the circumstances, the in-charge tax authority and the taxpayer may amend or terminate this APA.

Article 6 Transfer Pricing Principle and Calculation Method

The transfer pricing principle and calculation method used in this APA for the transactions between _____ (company name) and its related party(ies) should comply with the arm's length principle. The specific transfer pricing principle and calculation method are based on _____ .

Article 7 Annual Compliance Report

During the covered period of the APA, the taxpayer should file annual compliance reports in relation to the implementation situation of the APA within 5 months after the end of the taxable year, together with the following documents:

Article 8 Tax Inspection

This APA should list the content and requirements of the in-charge tax authority's review and evaluation on the taxpayer's implementation of the APA.

Article 9 Legal Binding Force of this APA

During the covered period of this APA, as long as the taxpayer complies with all the articles and requirements set out in this APA, the in-charge tax authority should acknowledge the relevant pricing issues as agreed with the taxpayer. If the taxpayer fails to comply with this APA, the in-charge tax authority may take actions according to the specific circumstances, or unilaterally terminate this APA.

Article 10 Renewal of this APA

This APA can be renewed consecutively but not automatically. If a renewal is required, the taxpayer should, within _____ months (days) before the expiration of this APA, submit a written application of renewal, together with reliable supporting documents to illustrate that the facts and the relevant environment remain substantially the same as described in this APA. Upon receipt of the application of renewal from the taxpayer, the in-charge tax authority should review and determine whether the renewal application should be accepted. If the renewal application is accepted, the in-charge tax authority will further discuss the renewal with the taxpayer to complete the renewal of the APA.

Article 11 Dispute Resolution

In the event of disputes over the implementation and interpretation of this APA, the in-charge tax authority and the taxpayer should first negotiate to resolve such issues. If the disputes cannot be resolved through negotiation, both parties may petition the upper level tax authority or the State Administration of Taxation (“SAT”) for mediation. If the taxpayer cannot accept the mediation resolution, it should consider revising or terminating this APA.

Article 12 Confidentiality and Responsibility

In relation to the information obtained by the in-charge tax authority and the taxpayer during the negotiation and implementation process of this APA, both parties have the obligation to maintain confidentiality, and are protected and restricted by the relevant tax regulations and confidentiality law.

Article 13 Effectiveness, Amendment and Termination

This APA will come into effect once signed and stamped by the legal or authorized representatives of both parties.

This APA is signed by the legal or authorized representatives of the in-charge tax authority and the taxpayer in (city), (province) on (day-month-year).

If the in-charge tax authority or the taxpayer amends or terminates this APA, the party should notify the other party. The notification should include the time of and the reason for the amendment or termination in written form.

Article 14 Avoidance of Double Taxation

The APA should list the method and content of the avoidance of double taxation.

Article 15 Supplementary Provisions

This APA should be prepared in Chinese, in two copies, one for the in-charge tax authority and the other for the taxpayer, each of which should have full authenticity. In case one party translates the APA into a foreign language and disputes arise in the interpretation of the APA, the Chinese version should prevail.
